Custom Component Models for New Products

Because Custom Component models allow you to integrate information that is not based on an item's historic data, Custom component models are also very useful for new product forecasting. Custom Component models allow you to "borrow" information from other items or integrate information from market research. Please see the Custom Component Model for New Products example in the New Product Forecasting lesson for an overview.